Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a system for adjusting display brightness of a display device, and more specifically, to a system for automatically adjusting the display brightness of the display device in response to the surrounding light. 2. Description of the Prior Art A display device is generally designed to display image. Once the image displayed by the display device is brighter than the surrounding environment (for example, a dark environment), the user will feel uncomfortable. As illustrated in FIG. 1, the conventional display device

10 is composed of a liquid crystal display panel 12 and a control circuit 14. The liquid crystal display panel 12 has a plurality of pixels and each pixel has a back-light unit 15 disposed behind the pixels. The control circuit 14 is connected to the liquid crystal display panel 12 for controlling the liquid crystal display panel 12 to display the desired image. When the surrounding environment is dark, the back-light units 15 of the liquid crystal display panel 12 will produce intense light to ensure that the liquid crystal display panel 12 is bright enough for the user to view. When the environment is bright, the liquid crystal display panel 12 will have a big white area to make the display of the image bright enough for the user to view. Generally, the white area occupies about one fourth of the screen area of the liquid crystal display panel 12. If the user is taking photographs or playing games during a bright environment, he/she will likely feel uncomfortable if there is a bright white area occupying a big portion of the screen area of the liquid crystal display panel 12. Thus, there is a need to develop an alternative display device for the user to view the displayed image

---

without feeling
uncomfortable. #include
